Air Voyage Across Lake Ontario. The successful voyage of Mr. Steiner from Toronto, across Lake Ontario to the vicinity of Oswego, was attended with some incidents of ult. at half-past four P. M., and in fifteen minutes the balloon attained an altitude of five thousand feet, the wind carrying it in a south-easterly direction at the speed of about thirty miles an hour. An hour later Mr. Steiner found himself at a hight of nine thousand feet. In his narration Mr. Steiner Heavy masses of clouds to the north and narth-west slowly accumulated, and in majes-tic silence floated eastward. Into their secrets it was given to the aeronaut to inquire To the dwellers upon earth they appeared solid and dark, but from the side turned skyward deep caveras were discernible in each, filled with the sun's rays, intensely, gloriously bright. But though their presence pleased the eye they chilled the atmosphere. The balloon began to descend, it required the discharge of a considerable quantity of ballast ere it was brought to a stand. Still further to add to the difficulty of the situation, a thick vapor rose up from the take, which, gathering round the Europa, became condensed on her surface, and added very considerably to her weight.

The balloon dropped down with the weight of water comparatively near the surface of the Lake, and was kept affeat by throwing over ballast. The Europa was thus lightened until she ascended higher than before. The narra-

The sun had gone down; darkness covered the face of the earth. It was very cold, and an uncomfortable feeling seized upon the aerial wanderer. His feet and hands became benumbed, his ears began to ache, and that hilarity, which all voyageurs describe as attendant upon ascent into rarified air, departed. By wrapping himself up, however, he managed to keep from freezing, and continued on his way. And now came an event in the voyage which well nigh proved fatal. When the sun had gone down, Prof. Steiner had tied the neck of the balloon to prevent any unnecessary flow of gas, so that the ascending power might be re-tained as long as possible. About eight o'clock, and in the space of five seconds, he suddenly found himself in the midst of an immense mass of vapor. It was pitch dark; he could not even see the balloon which bore him, but soon found he was rising with an immense speed. His attentive ear was caught by the hissing sound of the gas, which was forcing its way through; and, instantly springing into the net-ting, he felt that the balloon was distended to her utmost capacity. It was but the work of a moment to untio the string which confined the neck, and out came the hydrogen with a rush, which had nearly suffocated the traveler. The clouds disappeared as they had come, and once more the Europa went calmly on her way. To the north and north-east clouds were discernible, but elsewhere the stars twinkled in the clear heavens. It was still very cold, but more gas having been discharged a congenial atmosphere was soon reached. About half-past nine o'clock, Prof. Steiner neared the Little Sodus light, and shortly af-

WATER SPOUTS .-- A letter from Key West,

It is not long since we had a most magnificent exhibition of water spouts in the harbor. From a single cloud in the northwest we counted no less than thirteen, all playing away most beautifully; probably for a prize trident or trumpet. We have read somewhere of twelve water spouts being seen at Malta at once; but Key West has beaten Malta. A water spout here is almost of daily occurrence One crossed the barbor last week, and passed within one hundred feet of a fishing boat. It took up one of Lieutenant Westcott's buoys and whirled it about and about in the air, but the mooring anchor being too heavy, it was not carried off.

A CHAIN OF CITIES -The chain of cities extending along our Atlantic seaboard, it is expected, will show a great increase in the census to be taken next year. The population at the last census in 1850 was:

Bangor, 14,000; Portland, 20,000; Portsmouth, N. H., 10,000; Boston, 137.000; Providence, 12,000; New Haven, 20,000; Brooklyn, 128,000; New York, 515 000; Newark, 38,000; Philadelphia, 409,000; Wilmington, Del., 14,000; Baltimore, 169,000; Washington, 50,000; Alexandria, 8,800; Richmond, 27,570; Petersburg, 14,000; Norfolk, 20,700; Wilmington, N. He was dressed in a loose summer suit, and looked so blithe and happy that we could not forego stopping him his promenade, and telling him how hale and hearty he was. While visiting recently with his grand-parents, in Boardman Township, Mahoning County, he was taken suddenly ill, and upon investigation the cause was found to proceed from too violent muscular exertion, he being accustomed, like many other boys, of performing such feats as walking on his hands, standing on his head, etc. He con-tinued to grow worse from day to day, tue disease acting upon his physical nature, and not at all influencing his brain, until Tuesday of last week, when he expired. Diamond Mines in Arkansas-Pike's

Dr. David Dale Owen, now engaged in the geological survey of Arkansas, has published peril. His voyage commenced on the 24th a letter, in which be states that there is a possibility of finding diamonds in certain parts of the State. He says:

> During my geological reconnoissance this season in Jefferson county, I have discovered large quantities of silicified wood, bearing east and west, through sections 16 and 17, township 3, range 13, and it will doubtless be found in a corresponding course in many localities east and west, or south of west and north of east of these tracts. Along this range of wood, owing to the peculiar nature of its metamorphism, there is a possibility of finding diamonds, and it would be well for those residing in the vicinity of this forms tion to be alive to this fact and look out for them. If they occur in this district they are most likely to be discovered in the earth subjacent to the silicified stumps. Their pecu-liar adamautine luster, exceeding hardness as well as crystalline form will serve to distinguish them from limpid quartz, with which they are often confounded.

Gas Retorts.

A new gas retort has been invented, which possesses one or two unique and useful features. The object of one arrangement distin guishing the invention is, to prevent the for-mation or collection of tar in the mouth-piece of horizontal gas retorts, which is a source of such great inconvenience in retorts, having their heads constructed in the usual mannerand to this end, this feature of invention consists in so constructing the head of the retort as to fit up the lower part of the mouth-piece, which is always cool and pleasant; also inclined surface below the stand-pipe, that any tar which may be formed by condensation within the stand pipe and return into the mouthpiece may be collected upon the surface, and thereby caused to run back into the retort, where it is decomposed and converted into gas. Another feature peculiar to this inven-tion consists in securing the head of a horizon tal retort by means of an eccentric or cam and lever applied in combination with a horizontal cross-bar, so as to fasten the head by a very simple means. The device is said to answe the purpose in a very effective manner.

Singular Freak. An unmarried man, by the name of Phillip Fezman, residing about a mile this side of New London, Oneida County, came to his death a few days since, by the adoption of a singular and extraordinary freak. He lived with his mother, a widow woman, and about a year ago he took into his head that he ought not to eat anything but bread and water. He lived on that diet alone until about five or six weeks ago, when he again took a notion that his hands were so dirty that he aught not to eat bread, and water he would not drink only as he inspected it in the bucket as it came from the well; and sometimes he would require that a number of pails-full should be drawn before he would drink. For forty-three days before his death he ate not a mouthfull, as his mother is positive. He would wash his hands frequently for an hour at a time. While he lived on bread he would require that his part should be baked by itself, and then he would break off and cat it as he wanted it. When he became so weak that he could not go out, then he would carefully inspect the water brought him. It was a singular freak. He was, doubtless, partially insane, although he talked I was taking ten, the other evening, with a missionary friend, and was introduced to the pretty well on other subjects.—Home, N. Y.

These Machines have been steadily advancing in popular favor for the past year, and are nowesteeme by all who have given them a trial as the "Ne Plus Ultra" of Sewing Machines. The evenuess and regularity, and tightness of stitch made by them, has, more than anything else, tended to this result. Added to this is the undeniable fact of their simplicity and some of management, there being no band or cogwheels, as in some Machines, or leather pads and crocked needles, as in others. They commend themselves to the dress-maker by the regularity of the feeding arrangement, which never puckers or tears the work, by the uniformity of stitch alike on both sides of the fabric, by their noiselessness and rapidi-ty; to the tailor by their great strength and durability, tightness of stitch and tapacity for using linen thread; to families, by the combination of all these qualities.
